Carolyn,

I don't know whether you have yet spoken to Teresa about the outcome of the faculty meeting. If not, there is something you should know -- yesterday I received an email from Teresa (which I only just read) in which she indicated a willingness to teach the LAWR program in the summer. I don't know where Matt Williamson stands on this (he has not replied to my email inviting him to speak with me about summer teaching), and it may emerge that we would like to use Teresa during the summer. The problem is that I don't understand the significance of the Faculty's unwillingness to vote on approving Teresa as an adjunct. It seemed that there might be an undercurrent of opposition even to that.

Frankly, one thing that worries me is that some people may be opposed to Teresa serving in any role in part, at least, because they so despise her politics (and, especially, her activism about it). I hate to think that is the case, and I don't actually think it is, but I'm worried that I may be missing something.

In any event, I think that we need to move fairly soon on this if we expect to have Teresa available as an adjunct either this summer or next fall. I believe that she may begin looking for more permanent and substantial work outside the College of Law after she learns that she will not receive an LAWR position.
