1	Veronique Machelidon	Meredith College	Professor of World Languages and Cultures; Department Head	11/2020	2/23/2021	Professor Machelidon used the N- word several times in a lecture. The exact context is currently unknown. When students raised concerns, she defended herself by claiming that she is not American and that many from other countries do not know the word.	Racism	Placed under investigation, condemned in college statement, student petition for firing.	https://abc11. com/meredith-college- yeronique-machelidon- racism-culture- class/10364883/
2	J. Mark Ramseyer	Harvard University	Mitsubishi Professor of Japanese Legal Studies	12/2020	2/18/2021	Professor Ramseyer published an article, titled "Contracting for Sex in the Pacific War," in the International Review of Law and Economics. In it, he claims Korean and other women during WWII willingly prostituted themselves to Japenese soldiers, contradicting the more common narrative that these women were kidnapped and forced into sex slavery.	Support for sex slavery	Petition for article retraction, demand for apology, investigated by journal	https://www.nytimes. com/2021/02/26/world /asia/harvard- professor-comfort- women.html
3	Melissa Hargrove	The University of Tennessee, Knoxville	Lecturer in Africana Studies	2/3/2021	2/3/2021	Ms. Hargrove wrote the following phrase on a whiteboard during a class session: "Never Ignorant Getting Goals Accomplished," which, when made into an acronym, spells out a form of the N-word. This was in reference to a Tupac Shakur song of the same title. 		University of Chicago	Associate Professor of History	9/14/2017		Professor Fulton Brown, an acclaimed medievalist, was the subject of years-long criticism from fellow medieval scholar Dorothy Kim of Vassar College. On her blog In the Middle, Professor Kim published a post titled "Teaching Medieval Studies in a Time of White Supremacy," in which she argues that medieval European history has been "weaponized" by contemporary white supremacists. Fulton Brown responded in her own blog, Fencing Bear at Prayer, with her own article "How to Signal You Are Not a White Supremacist." Members and friends of the International Piers Plowman Society viewed Fulton Brown's response as racist in tone and content. Some of his past research is seen as controversial, so students disrputed the event with a protest. This protest turned into a violent mob when Murray and Stanger attempted to leave. A student pulled Stanger's hair and twisted her neck, after which she went to the hospital and wore a neck brace. Professor Karega posted several statements on Facebook perceived as antisemitic and anti-Israel. These include posts claiming that ISIS is run by the CIA and Mossad and that Israel orchestrated the Charlie Hebdo shooting. Professor Peterson released a Youtube video titled "Professor against political correctness: Part I," in which he critiqued Canadian laws protecting various forms of gender expression. He also expressed doubt about the concept of the "gender spectrum" in general. In a Facebook post, Professor Hall suggested links between Israel and 9/11. He also expressed skepticism regarding certain events of the Holocaust. 	Michael Persinger	Laurentian University University of Kansas	Professor of Psychology Assistant Professor of Communication Studies	10/2015		Professor Persinger distributed a survey to his introductory psychology course in which he asked students to sign off on the use of certain explitives in class, including "f*ck," "p*ssy," and "f*g." He claims that the use of these words is one of his pedagogical "techniques," as they provoke a particular reaction in those who say and hear them. During a class discussion about race, Professor Quenette attempted to provide an example of her "white privilege" by saying the following: "As a white woman I just never have seen the racism It's not like I see 'n*gger' spray painted on walls."
